Training offer: TacRope

rope techniques for counter-terrorism operations

PETZL technical partner

TacRope is a training system in the rope techniques used in counter-terrorism operations. It is based on international standards. The training combines working in two-rope systems for hazard removal with single-rope systems for assault operations.

The training is for officers and soldiers of counter-terrorism units. Knowledge of urban tactics is required.

NOTE: this training is not available to civilians.

L1 – Tactical Rope Responder (TRR)
Mainly DRT (double rope technique), basic movement on ropes, anchors, edges, self-rescue with escape kits, an introduction to SRT (single rope technique) and simple tactical rappels.

L2 – Tactical Rope Technician (TRT)
Advanced DRT, self-rescue, rescuing a partner and third parties, improvised anchors, raising and lowering, operations in low visibility, in darkness and with NVGs, team assault rappels.

L3 – Tactical Rope Master (TRM)
Leader level: stretchers and Tyroleans, advanced systems, rigging a haul system onto a loaded rope, risk assessment, command and planning, basics of equipment inspection.

The levels must be completed in order: L1, then L2, then L3. There is, however, no minimum period before you can move on to the next level.
